Vancouver's definitive seafood destination serves only the freshest, wild & line-caught seafood. Located in the heart of Yaletown and housed in a funky converted warehouse building, the room displays original century-old brick, beams and industrial piping contrasted with modern flourishes and splashes of vibrant color in contemporary artworks. An open kitchen runs the length of the North wall with a crescent sushi bar operating opposite allowing diners action views from all angles. Discreetly tucked away, the walls of the private wine cellar are lined with thousands of bottles from the acclaimed wine list. Blue Water serves one the largest selections of fresh oysters in the city and is renowned for its West Coast Seafood Towers; platters piled high with fresh fish and shellfish on ice, served with original house dressings and mignonettes - great for sharing!

Global, no nonsense tastes tripping. The menu reflects Chef Michael Vilorio's borderless inspiration. It takes you around the world without leaving Vancouver – from a Fukuoka noodle counter to a Casablanca medina. Not fusion, Chef's methods are true to their mother-kitchens but styled for the next generation. Mod and moody. Zin works for new-formal diners, romantics, over-drinks dealmakers and late-nighters with a hunger on. The space ignores geometry and moves like a dancer in a dark room. Named for zinfandel, the varietal-of-the-moment and the wine that pair's best with global cuisine, Zin features an impressive bar list.
